Cotton Mill request ahead

Historic Board action needed to begin project work

By PEGGY VLEREBOME
Special to the Courier

The developers of the Cotton Mill will ask the Historic Board next month for permission to demolish remnants of buildings behind the former mill, a bridge between the main building and the picker room, a warehouse, concrete slabs and a shed. If the board agrees, the work will be the first visible signs of transforming the massive 1884 building into a hotel at Vaughn Drive and St. Michael's Avenue.

Ron Bateman of Madison, one of the development partners in Riverton LLC, posted the required public notice signs Saturday at the property.

The Historic Board meeting will begin at 5:30 p.m. Monday, August 26 at City Hall.

Early next month, the Madison City Council will consider final approval for designation of the area encompassing the Cotton Mill property as an Economic Revitalization Area, which is a step toward receiving tax incentives and other financial advantages. The council already has given preliminary approval.

The next step is for a public hearing where remonstrances and objections will be heard, followed by a vote to approve, modify and approve, or rescind the preliminary approval.

The public hearing will be at the next City Council meeting, which will begin at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, August 6 at the Clifty Six fire station, 631 Clifty Drive next to Madison Consolidated High School. The council will be meeting there instead of at City Hall as part of National Night Out.

Although work at the site has been limited to brush removal and required environmental testing, Bateman said, much has been going on behind the scenes. Once a week, there is a 15-way conference call to keep everyone involved updated, he said.

The developers expect to have architectural plans this week and to complete the purchase by the end of the month, he said. Indoor work is expected to begin in late winter or early spring, he said. The other development partners are his two former partners in a development in Alaska and Dora Hospitality Group, a Fishers, Indiana, company that manages hotels.

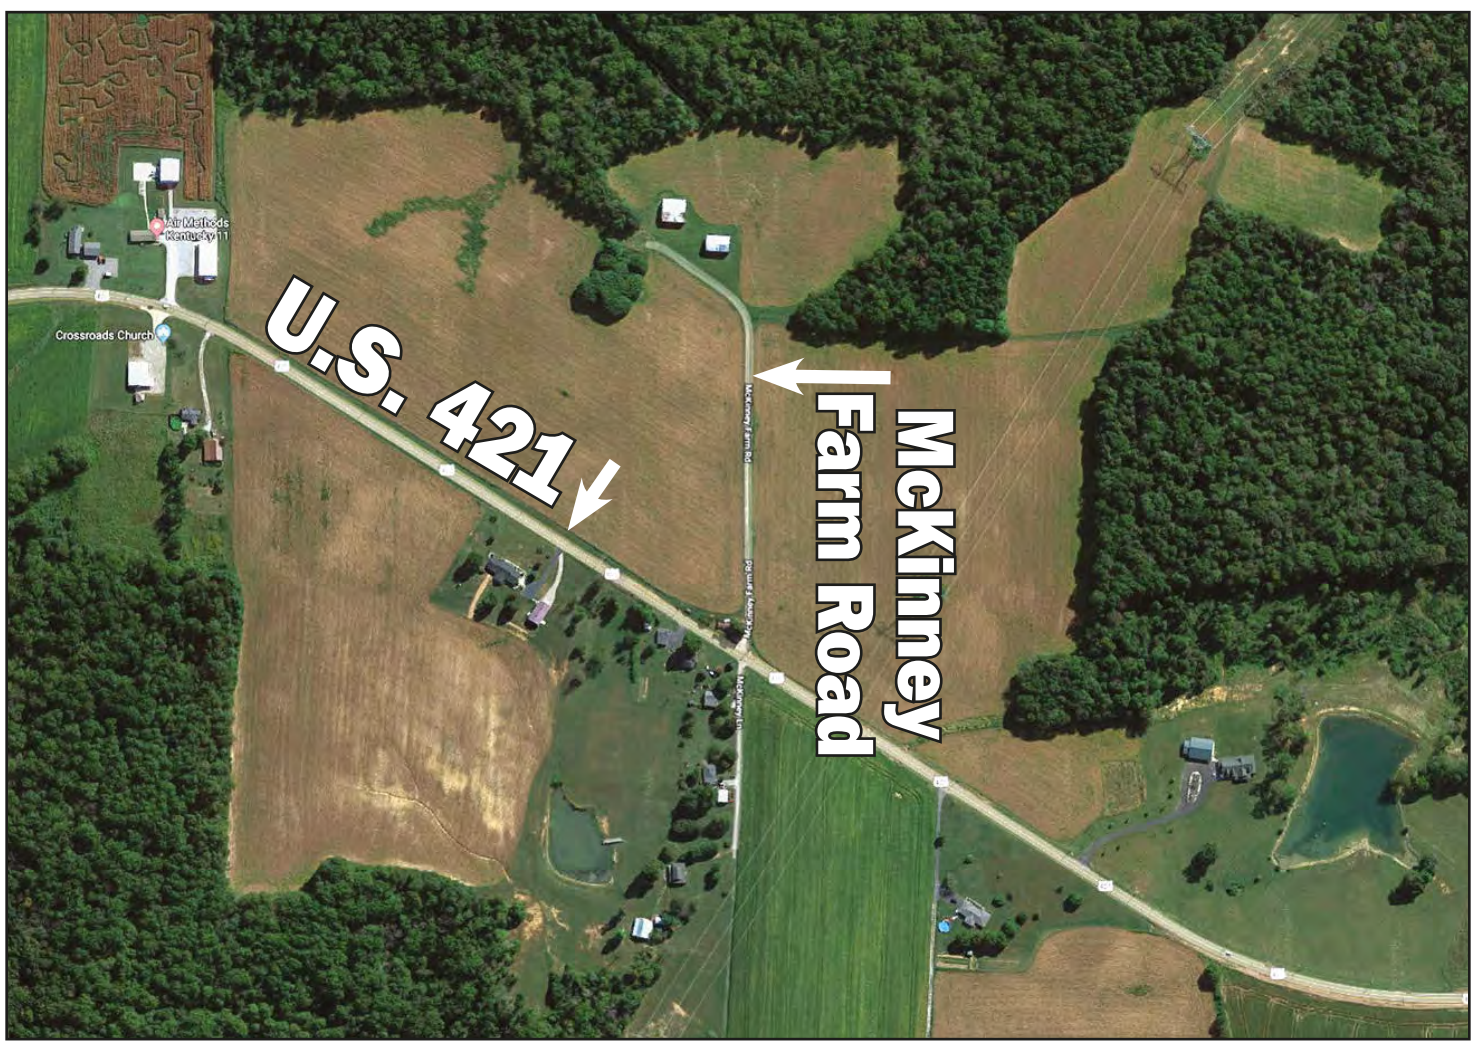
SLUDGE FARM PLAN UNDER FIRE



R&R Septic and Excavation Services of Pleasureville, Kentucky, recently purchased about 270 acres of land on McKinney Farm Road between Bedford and Milton of which 118 acres has been earmarked for sludge disposal and a 4.8-million-gallon holding pond. The site would dispose of manufacturing waste from TreeHouse Foods Inc., an Oldham County, Kentucky, factory that makes jams, jellies and salsa and is looking for an alternative to disposing of its manufacturing waste with the Oldham County Waste Water Treatment Plant. Residents taking up fight against plan

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier staff writer

A state application for a Henry County company to locate a sludge disposal farm just off U.S. 421 in Trimble County has local residents organizing to fight the proposal during the current written comment period and at a public hearing scheduled for early next month in Bedford, Kentucky.

R&R Septic and Excavation Services, 1357 Bunk Road, Pleasureville, Kentucky, recently purchased about 270 acres of land on McKinney Farm Road between Bedford and Milton of which 118 acres has been earmarked for sludge disposal and a 4.8-million-gallon holding pond.

The company said it hopes to use the site to dispose of production waste generated by TreeHouse Foods Inc., an Oldham County, Kentucky, factory that makes jams, jellies and salsa and is looking for an alternative to disposing of its manufacturing waste with the Oldham County Waste Water Treatment Plant.

R&R had originally tried to locate the facility in Henry County — where the company, which also services septic systems, already operates one disposal facility as well as another in Shelby County — but residents there voiced opposition and Henry's zoning board declined to issue the permits R&R would need to put in a second operation. At that time the company said it would pursue options elsewhere, and neighboring Trimble became the next stop in that process.

Trimble County, whose Fiscal Court is in the process of repealing its own planning and zoning ordinance adopted there in 2016, may lack the teeth to stop the permit, especially if the zoning ordinance is abolished. The county's fiscal court held the first reading of a measure to reject the zoning ordinance recently and could take final action on that next month or even earlier if a special meeting is called.

County Judge Executive Todd Pollock said the existing zoning ordinance is not popular with a large segment of the residents because they don't support being told how to use their property and don't like the idea that an appointed, rather than elected, board controls those decisions.

Without a zoning ordinance, Trimble would have to rely on the county's solid waste disposal ordinance — adopted decades ago when the Valley View Landfill opened on the other end of the county — but even Pollock is uncertain if the solid waste ordinance could stop a sludge farm although it could be the county's best hope.

The sludge proposed for disposal in Trimble is not exactly a solid but a slurry that would include water and waste by-products from the jam, jelly and salsa manufacturing process. Pollock said he toured R&R's Henry County operation recently and said the operation seemed pretty odorless but he had no way of determining if there were other negative impacts. He said the slurry adds a lot of nitrogen to the soil — kind of like applying ammonia nitrogen — and there were cattle grazing on the farm.

"It's a big concern. We'd want to be very specific about what they can put there even if we allow it," Pollock said. "I think we would want to be very specific about what the operation is."

Hundreds of county residents don't want it at all and more than 700 have taken to social media to join a "Trimble County Citizens Against Sludge!" Facebook page to voice their concerns and share information and ideas. Most of the dialogue centers around the potential negative impact of the facility including extra truck traffic, potential odor, threats to streams and groundwater and impact on quality of life and property values

Milton woman drowns in Ohio

Courier staff report

The body of a 72-year-old Trimble County woman was recovered from the Ohio River near Milton, Kentucky, after a boater spotted the body in the water Sunday afternoon while fishing.

Kentucky State Police said Phyllis Smith, of Milton, apparently died from drowning and no foul play is suspected.

The Trimble County Coroner's Office declined to speculate on how or why Smith was in the river but said the family has been notified and that an autopsy is pending at the Kentucky Medical Examiners Office in Louisville.

The body was reported at about 12:05 p.m. when the fisherman notified authorities that there was a deceased person in the river.

Smith lived in downtown Milton, which is near the river. Kentucky State Police, the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife, the U.S. Coast Guard and the Trimble County Sheriff's Office all responded but state police took over the investigation.

The body was recovered in the water and transferred to the coroner's office at the Milton Boat Ramp shortly thereafter. The coroner's office said results of autopsy and toxicology tests could take weeks to complete.

Deadline for habitat funds grants closes August 9

By CAROL KUGLER
(Bloomington) Herald Times

Improving habitat for monarch butterflies is beneficial to many other animals, from pollinating insects to pheasant and quail.

That's why Pheasants Forever and Quail Forever has partnered with the federal Natural Resources Conservation Service to offer landowners assistance in establishing habitat for monarch butterflies and other wildlife. For Hoosiers, applications need to be filed by August 9 to be eligible for the next round of funding through the Improving Working Lands for Monarch Butterflies Regional Conservation Partnership Program.

The eight-state program helps landowners establish areas of unproductive cropland, land that borders fields, pastures and buffers around waterways and wetlands.

In Indiana, there is about $260,000 available to help Hoosier landowners, according to Ryan Owen, a farm bill wildlife biologist with Pheasants and Quail Forever who works in Indiana. Even so, Owen said there are usually only a few people who apply for the funding to help with habitat.

"Traditionally in Indiana that has not been a popular fund pool, but I think a lot of that is due to lack of publicity," he said.

Anyone who applies for the funds should know by the end of September if they were accepted into the program, Owen said. Once a landowner is approved for the program, someone from the agency will visit the land to review the landowner's objectives and help them

Crash on Interstate 70 leaves 2 dead, 1 hospitalized

Indiana

GREENCASTLE — Authorities are investigating a multi-vehicle crash in Clay County that left two elderly people dead and a third person hospitalized. Indiana State Police say the SUV the two victims were traveling in was rear-ended by a semi tractor-trailer on Interstate 70. The deceased were identified Saturday as Dolores C. Soroa, 67, of Florida and Anelis Nora Herrera Perez,70, of Cuba. The crash happened a day earlier when the driver of the semi failed to recognize traffic was slowing around 5:30 p.m. and hit the SUV, which forced it into the median. The semi then struck a second vehicle. A fourth vehicle became involved in the fallout. Police don't believe drugs or alcohol were a factor. Once the investigation is finished, it'll be turned over to the Clay County Prosecutor's Office for review.

State blames doc's wife for mishandling vaccine

MOUNT STERLING,— The Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure said a Mount Sterling doctor allowed his unlicensed wife to mishandle vaccines, causing an infection outbreak in patients across Kentucky, Indiana and Ohio. The Lexington Herald-Leader reported the board on Friday placed Dr. Paul E. McLaughlin on five years' probation. He also was ordered to pay $5,000 for delegating to someone without a medical license and contributing to a public health crisis. The vaccination provider "Location Vaccination" is owned and operated by McLaughlin's wife, Fairshinda Sabounchi McLaughlin. The company was hired during last year's flu seasons to provide vaccines to adult employees in more than 20 municipalities. The state Department of Public Health first began investigating the company in February after learning its patients were experiencing pain, swelling and lumps at their injection sites.

$50M replacement for fairgrounds barn

INDIANAPOLIS — Indiana State Fairgrounds officials say a $50 million project will replace its nearly century-old swine barn with a new building that can host events around the year. Fairgrounds Executive Director Cynthia Hoye said the current open-air building can't generate year-round revenue because it isn't climate controlled. The new building will be called the Fall Creek Pavilion and will still house livestock during the state fair. Most of the current building that opened in 1923 will be demolished. Work could start after next year's state fair. Republican Gov. Eric Holcomb proposes dipping into the state's $2.3 billion in reserves to pay cash for the project. Democrats have lambasted that plan, saying the money should go to other priorities such as raising teacher pay or improving access to affordable child care.

New USS Indianapolis commissioning set

BURNS HARBOR — The Navy is planning to commission its new USS Indianapolis combat vessel Oct. 26 at Burns Harbor along Lake Michigan. It is the fourth military vessel carrying the Indianapolis name. The second USS Indianapolis was sunk by a Japanese submarine in July 1945 while returning from a Pacific island where it delivered key components for the Hiroshima atomic bomb. Only 317 of its nearly 1,200 crewmen survived the sinking and days in shark-infested waters. The ship was built at a Marinette, Wisconsin, shipyard and will be based near Jacksonville, Florida. It is a Freedom-class littoral ship designed to be highly maneuverable for missions such as mine-clearing and anti-submarine warfare.

Arrest in 8 arsons in Indy since 2014

INDIANAPOLIS — Authorities say a 40-year-old man has been arrested after eight arson fires since 2014 in Indianapolis. Police say the man is a person of interest in a July 2 fire that appeared suspicious to firefighters at the scene. He was recently arrested in Evansville and police say he's also believed to be involved in seven other arson fires, including two others this year, two in 2018 and three in 2014. Indianapolis police say in a statement that the man was found through a collaboration of Indianapolis police and fire investigators, as well as the U.S. Marshals service. Police say the Marion County prosecutor's office will review the case and make a decision about charges. Police are asking anyone with information to contact authorities.

Getty Foundation grants to 2 iconic buildings

COLUMBUS — Two modernist buildings have landed more than $300,000 for the upkeep of the historic structures. The Los Angeles-based Getty Foundation awarded a $150,000 grant Wednesday for the conservation of the North Christian Church in Columbus. That 1964 building features a soaring metal spire and was designed by Finnish architect Eero Saarinen. Another $170,000 was awarded to the Miller House and Garden. That 1953 residence was also designed by Saarinen and includes a garden by landscape architect Dan Kiley. The two grants are the foundation's only gifts this year for structures in North America. Richard McCoy of Landmark Columbus told The (Columbus) Republic the grants shine "a bright light" on the city.

Nonprofit to open Indy LGBTQ youth housing

INDIANAPOLIS — A nonprofit group is preparing to open housing in Indianapolis for LGBTQ youth and young adults who are experiencing homelessness. WISH-TV reported that Trinity Haven would be the first of its kind in Indiana by providing transitional housing for people ages 16 to 21 for up to two years. The center will have trained, licensed staff and initially house up to 10 people. Trinity Haven said it will offer a "safe, welcoming, and family-like environment for LGBTQ youth who do not have homes of their own." The group is partnering with the Indiana Department of Child Services to be licensed to help young people still in the child-welfare system and those who've aged out. An official opening date hasn't been announced, but that's expected to happen sometime later this summer.

6 years for role in death of son, 2

FORT WAYNE— A Fort Wayne woman has been sentenced to six years in prison on neglect charges stemming from her 2-year-old son's beating death. Amber V. Garrettm, 27, was sentenced Friday after pleading guilty in June to two felony neglect counts involving her son and daughter. The Journal Gazette reported that Garrett was charged after her son, Malakai Garrett, was fatally beaten in 2017. Her boyfriend at the time, Mitchell Vanryn, 29, was sentenced to 40 years in prison after being convicted of aggravated battery and domestic battery in Malakai's death. A coroner testified that the boy's severe injuries were equivalent to a fall from a three-story building. Allen County Judge Fran Gull told Garrett during Friday's hearing that it's "beyond comprehension" that she didn't take action after noticing her son's bruises.

Alleged drug leader's trial in SW Indiana

INDIANAPOLIS — The federal trial of the alleged leader of a violent Indianapolis-based drug trafficking ring has been moved to southwestern Indiana after the man's first trial ended in a mistrial. Richard Grundy III and four co-defendants first stood trial July 8 in Indianapolis on federal drug trafficking charges, but a mistrial was declared July 10 after a court order concerning jurors' personal information was violated. The Indianapolis Star reported court documents show Grundy will now stand trial July 29 at U.S. District Court in Evansville. Prosecutors declined to comment Friday on the change of venue. A federal indictment alleges that Grundy led the so-called "Grundy Crew" and that it sold more than 3,700 pounds of marijuana and 280 pounds of methamphetamine on Indianapolis' streets between April 2016 and November 2017.

Memorial for victims of 1915 ship disaster

MICHIGAN CITY — A northern Indiana museum is planning a memorial for 844 people who died more than a century ago when a ship capsized on the Chicago River. The SS Eastland was loaded with employees from Chicago's Western Electric Company when it capsized before embarking on a planned trek across Lake Michigan for a company picnic in Michigan City, Indiana. The July 24, 1915, disaster killed 844 people, making it the deadliest shipwreck on the Great Lakes. The (Northwest Indiana) Times reported the Old Lighthouse Museum in Michigan City will hold a memorial ceremony July 27.

Body camera upgrades for South Bend police

SOUTH BEND — The Indiana city where Democratic presidential candidate Pete Buttigieg is mayor is updating its police officers' body camera technology after the recent fatal police shooting of a black man. South Bend Police Sgt. Ryan O' Neill fatally shot Eric Logan on June 16, but the incident wasn't captured on video because his body camera wasn't activated. The shooting sparked protests, prompting Buttigieg to leave the campaign trail for several days to answer questions about public safety and race. The technology upgrades will mean officers' body cameras can be activated manually or automatically when a squad car door is opened, the South Bend Tribune reported. And soon, sensors will activate the cameras when an officer's gun is drawn from the holster. The sensor technology wasn't available when South Bend initially purchased the cameras last year for $1.5 million, BodyWorn officials said.

Deputy shot on duty returns home

WHITLEY CITY — A sheriff's deputy who was shot in southeastern Kentucky while conducting a wellness check has returned home from the hospital. WYMT-TV reported Kentucky State Police said McCreary County sheriff's deputy Dustin Watkins was released Sunday from the University of Tennessee Medical Center, where he had surgery after the shooting. Police said Watkins, 28, was shot last week when he went to visit a home and a man sitting in a vehicle fired several shots from a handgun. State police say Mark L. Dungan, 48, fired several rounds and then fled in the vehicle, striking the patrol car of a county constable as he sped away. Police later found Dungan at a nearby cemetery and arrested him without incident. He faces several charges.

House panel advances Bevin's pension bill

FRANKFORT — Kentucky Gov. Matt Bevin's pension-relief proposal won approval from a legislative committee on Saturday, clearing its first hurdle of the mid-summer special session. The House State Government Committee approved the measure after defeating two Democratic-sponsored proposals during a three-hour hearing. The action sets the stage for a vote in the Republican-dominated House on the GOP governor's proposal. The focus would then shift to the Republican-led Senate, which would take up the bill next. The special session began Friday and is expected to continue until Wednesday. Special sessions cost taxpayers about $66,000 per day from when the session begins to the day lawmakers adjourn. Bevin called lawmakers back to the statehouse to take up his replacement measure after vetoing a pension bill in April following the conclusion of this year's regular legislative session.

Traffic accident or homicide, what's difference?

Speed sets I-465 multi-fatal crash apart from I-70 fatalities

By ALEX MODESITT
(Terre Haute) Tribune-Star

A week ago on Interstate 465 on the north side of Indianapolis, a distracted semi driver slammed his speeding truck into the rear of cars stopped for construction, according to state police.

A young Indianapolis mother and her twin 18-month-old daughters died. Each burned to death in a wake of wreckage strung out nearly three-quarters of a mile. Seven other people were injured.

Bruce Pollard, 57, of Sturgeon, Missouri, was arrested and on Thursday charged with three counts of reckless homicide as a Level 5 felony, and one count of reckless operation of a vehicle in a highway work zone, a Class A misdemeanor.

What Wabash Valley residents are now asking is: What makes the Indianapolis case so different from fatal Interstate 70 crashes in or near Terre Haute in which one or more people were killed under similar circumstances — a distracted truck driver failing to slow and running into slowed or stopped passenger cars?

In two of those cases, the semi drivers face no more than minor traffic charges.

Two children were killed in July 2017 on I-70 near mile marker 17 when French-Canadian semi driver Amritpal Singh crashed into a van driven by Christina Bereda, then of Beavercreek, Ohio.

Driving about 63 mph, with traffic snarled just outside a construction zone, state police said Singh looked away from the road and failed to see stopped traffic ahead.

The collision killed Brennen Bereda, 5, and Finley Bereda, 16 months. Christina and son Jordan Bereda, 3, were critically injured in the crash and flown to Indianapolis-area hospitals.

Singh did not exceed the speed limit, but did tell police he tried to brake before the crash but they failed. A post-crash inspection found the driver's brakes were in working order.

Singh was charged earlier this year in Clay County with two traffic charges, driving too fast for the conditions and for following too closely.

Shortly after that accident, Clay Prosecutor Robert Pell (now a judge) said Indiana's reckless homicide laws are fairly narrow in scope, at least so far as they've been adjudicated.

Pell cited two specific cases decided by the Court of Appeals of Indiana, Whitaker v. State (2002) of Indiana and State of Indiana v. Boadi (2009).

In both, the court said, "relatively slight deviations from the traffic code, even if they technically rise to the level of 'reckless driving,' do not necessarily support a reckless homicide conviction if someone is subsequently killed."

In both opinions, the court decided a driver can drive distracted, moderately faster than the speed limit, or violate any minor traffic code that would otherwise be an infraction, and that not necessarily be enough to support a reckless homicide charge if someone were killed as a result.

The prosecutor said that because Singh wasn't speeding, wasn't past his maximum allowable drive time or under the influence of drugs or alcohol, the law doesn't find him anything other than negligent.

The Bereda family: Brennen Bereda, 5 years old (left) and Finley Bereda, 16 months (in her mother's lap) were killed in the July 18, 2017, crash on Interstate 70 in Clay County in which a semi crashed into the rear of the minivan driven by Christina Bereda (right, holding Finley). Jorden Bereda, age 3 (center) and Christina Bereda survived. At left is father and husband David Bereda. (Submitted photo)

Pell said the court was clear in its opinion on wrecks they deem an accident.

"Proof that an accident arose out of the inadvertence, lack of attention, forgetfulness or thoughtfulness of the driver of a vehicle, or from an error of judgment on his part, will not support a charge of reckless homicide," the court cited in Whitaker.

Again a similar crash happened March 16 of this year when Pierre St. Jean, another French-Canadian semi driver, failed to see traffic stopped for an earlier accident near the 11-mile marker on I-70.

St. Jean crashed into the car driven by Morgan Johnson, 20, of Reelsville, Indiana, causing the car to burst into flames. In all, the crash involved two tractor trailers and five passenger vehicles.

State police said St. Jean was driving just 41 mph when he crashed, but, for whatever reason, didn't stop before causing the chain-reaction crash. Johnson was killed in the accident.

Vigo County Prosecutor Terry Modesitt charged St. Jean with driving too fast for the conditions, a Class C infraction that carries a maximum $500 fine but no jail time.

Modesitt came to the same conclusion as Pell, saying that simple negligence, like not paying attention to what's happening on the road or failing to stop in time to avoid an accident, falls outside the realm of criminal prosecution in Indiana.

And while neither Modesitt or then-Clay Prosecutor Robert Pell argued that Singh or St. Jean weren't negligent in their duty to other drivers, they've said neither were negligent enough to constitute criminal recklessness as defined in state court rulings.

Pollard's speed in a construction zone appears to have been the difference that allowed Marion County deputy prosecuting attorney Ross Anderson to file criminal charges instead of traffic violations.

Pollard, the semi driver charged last week in the Koons' deaths, was traveling through a construction zone on Indianapolis north side, near Keystone Avenue, according to probable cause affidavit filed by the Marion County Prosecutor's Office.

He admitted to looking away from the road as he reached for his tea. In the time it took for him to look back toward the road, police say Pollard was crashing into the Koons' car as it was stopped in construction traffic.

The Koons' car was immediately engulfed in flames, a fire so intense," it completely burned off all markings on the vehicle including the VIN number. The fire also burned the surrounding grassy area and metal guard rail," according to the affidavit.

Pollard, 57, of Sturgeon, Missouri, told police after the crash he thought he was driving 30 to 35 mph, or 10 to 15 below the construction-zone speed limit of 45 mph. He also said he tried to apply his brakes but they had locked up on him.

Data collected by Indiana State Police investigators from Pollard's electronic control unit showed he was driving 65 mph — 20 mph over the limit — when he struck the Koons' car and that he didn't brake until after he crashed.

In short, local prosecutors say, unless they can point to either a concurrent crime or to a factor (such as clearly excessive speed) that establishes recklessness to a criminal level, there is nothing in Indiana law that lets them charge homicide in a traffic collision — and Indiana courts have repeatedly said so.

Put another way, while Indiana has a reckless homicide charge, proving it in a traffic collision requires prosecutors to point to either intent or to a factor that shows a behavior so gross a reasonable person should realize death could result.

Distraction or inadvertence, in and of themselves, do not meet that standard.

Further, lawyers say, the reckless homicide option is the only homicide charge available because Indiana does not have vehicular or negligent homicide statutes.

Since at least since 1977, Indiana law and its interpretation by the courts mean auto collision deaths caused by negligence generally fall outside the realm of criminal prosecution, prosecutors say.

The exception has been that intentional or gross deviation from standard driving conduct appears to be enough to sustain a charge of reckless homicide. The court has cited as examples driving erratically on a dark highway without headlights, consuming alcohol and driving around a corner at 100 mph.

"Speed may also support a reckless homicide conviction," the court said in its 2009 decision in State v. Boadi, "but only greatly excessive speeds, such as 20 or more miles per hour over the posted speed limit, or where inclement weather and poor road conditions render higher speeds greatly unreasonable."

Two Peru natives keep circus tradition alive

By CARSON GERBER
Kokomo Tribune

PERU – When Jacob Minns was 12 years old, his piano teacher took him to the Peru Circus City Festival for a special excursion to try his hand on a one-of-a-kind steam calliope.

Minns sat down at the miniature keyboard, played a song called "Oh! Dem Golden Slippers" – and was hooked.

"I just took off," he said. "I had no problem picking up how to play it. It was like it was second nature."

Three years later, Minns sat behind another antique steam calliope as it rolled down the streets of Peru in the annual Circus City Festival Parade. He was just 15, and the youngest person to ever play the steam instrument in the parade.

And on Saturday, Minns, now 22, once again took his place behind the keyboard on the nearly 100-year-old calliope blasting out jovial circus tunes to the crowds that lined the streets during the longest running and only circus parade left in the country. The festival this year is celebrating its 60th season.

"When I'm playing in the parade, I'll look up in the middle of a song and see people with these big grins on their faces," he said. "Calliopes are happy instruments. The sound of it is wonderful. It gives you such a good feeling, because you know you're making peoples' days."

Minns has played in the parade now for eight years, making him one of the longest serving calliope players in Peru's circus history.

That's an honor that's not lost on Minns – a Peru native who grew up watching the parade every year as a kid and seeing the steam rolling off the whistles of the instrument.

Now, Minns is one of the best calliope players around.

Tim Bessignano, the circus festival's vice president of the museum and exhibits who helps maintain the instruments, said Minns' has an innate talent in his playing that evokes the spirit and sound of the early American circuses.

"There are people out there who can play, but they can't play circus music," Bessignano said. "That's what we need, especially during the circus festival, and he's pretty gifted when it comes to playing. If you give him the song and the rhythm, he can pick up just about everything."

Minns' talent for the instrument makes sense, considering he's majoring in organ performance at Indiana University. He's set to start on his master's degree next year at Ball State University, and recently landed a month-long playing gig at St. Olaf Catholic Church in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

But even though he's played organ and piano nearly his entire life, playing the calliope during Peru's circus always feels special for Minns.

"It's just like greeting an old friend. It doesn't get old," he said. "It's like a relationship, and one you can't get rid of."

Minns loves calliopes, and that love stems from the instrument's deep roots in Peru.

Those roots were planted by Dave Morecraft, a Peru native who was one of the last steam calliope builders in the world.

Morecraft died in December 2016 from an illness at the age of 57, but his calliopes live on in locations around the globe.

Zach Morecraft, his 33-year-old son and a board member of the International Circus Hall of Fame, said his dad was an engineer who taught himself how to build the instruments back in the 1980s after seeing one in a parade.

But instead of buying one, he decided just to build it. He personally machined the castings, rolled and brazed the copper tubes and assembled all the parts onto a manifold of his own construction.

He eventually built around six calliopes inside his Peru shop. Four of those were made for riverboats, including ships in Holland and Japan. One of those also went into the American Queen, the largest riverboat ever built that operates on the Mississippi River.

Morecraft also built a calliope just for himself. It was that instrument that played for years in the Peru circus parade – and it was the same calliope Minns played for the first time when he was 12.

On Wednesday, Zach Morecraft and Minns could be found near the Peru circus building helping fire up the festival's largest calliope called the Gentry, which was built in the 1920s in Cincinnati and is housed in a circus wagon that was made in Peru in 1901. The whole contraption is hauled on the bed of a 1949 Ford pickup.

The calliope was originally built with a coal-burning furnace to produce the steam that blasts through the whistles to create sound. It was Minns' grandfather who installed a modern-day gas furnace to do the job.

Today, Minns and Morecraft just play to entertain the crowds at the Peru circus festival. But their love of the instrument goes deeper than that. For them, it's about keeping one of America's most unique musical traditions alive.

That's why they're both working to restore one of Morecraft's father's old calliopes. The two are making their own whistles and other parts to get the instrument into perfect playing condition.

It's a skill only a handful of people in the world have.

Pothole, pothole, go away!

Indiana Department of Transportation equipment operator Jim Brooks (above) runs a backhoe Monday as Jared Carlock (with shovel) and crew members (right), Mike Cutshaw, Mark Henry and Robbie Lewis work to fill in a pesky pothole in the 400 block of East Main Street in downtwon Madison. The pothole has reappeared several times on East Main this summer ever since a contractor for Madison Public Works cut the street while repairing a broken water line. The INDOT crew dug the area out and refilled and paved it Monday but noted the problem may not entirely go away until a more premanent fix is completed to handle the heavy traffic the area receives. Deadline for habitat establish how to improve their property.

"It's a great fit for small farms, urban farms, organic farms," said Jerry Raynor, state conservationist with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Natural Resources Conservation Service.

Raynor said applicants have to meet the eligibility requirements, but he encourages anyone interested to sign up and see if they can receive funds. While monarch butterflies are the species most people recognize as having difficulty finding enough habitat, Raynor said many other animal species benefit when habitat for monarch butterflies and other pollinating insects is increased.

There are species of ants, bats, beetles, birds, flies, moths and wasps that also act as pollinators. Having all of those animals available to pollinate plants helps farmers with not only agricultural crops but also with vegetable and fruit crops, he said.

Helping landowners better their land is an ongoing focus of the Natural Resources Conservation Service, Raynor explained.

While Raynor's agency helps with assistance, it's the Pheasants and Quail Forever staff that determine who is eligible and will be approved to participate in the program.

Jared Wiklund, public relations manager with Pheasants Forever, said his group's participation in the program starts with the fact that improving habitat for monarch butterflies also helps pheasants and quail, who often eat insects.

"Pollinator habitat is excellent brood rearing habitat for pheasants and quail and other upland game species," he said. "They require protein-rich insects the first several weeks of their life and pollinator habitat produces that."

Pheasants and Quail Forever has included 850 million milkweed seeds in its pollinator mixes as of November 2018. Those seeds include nine kinds of milkweed, which is the only plant upon which monarch butterflies will lay their eggs. (Photo from Wikimedia Commons)

Besides providing areas for quail and pheasants, the improved habitat areas also provide the pollinating insects necessary for ensuring Americans have many of the foods we eat.

"A lot of people don't realize that one in three bites of food that you're going to have throughout the day require pollination of plants," he said, adding that most food in grocery stores wouldn't be there without pollinators. "They are essential for the food web, not just for wildlife but for humans as well."

To that end, Pheasants and Quail Forever has included 850 million milkweed seeds in its pollinator mixes as of November 2018. Those seeds include nine kinds of milkweed, which is the only plant upon which monarch butterflies will lay their eggs. Wiklund's group has "impacted 233,354 acres for pollinators," he said, adding that those contributions are noteworthy because of the Pollinator Partnership Action Plan designated by the White House in 2016 that calls for 1 billion new milkweed stems to be "established" by 2020.

and how to stop it.

State Rep. Rick Rand (D-Trimble County) said there's just not enough information available at this time to determine what immediate or longterm impact a sludge farm would have on Trimble County. He asked the state for and was granted a public hearing, which is to to be at Bedford Elementary at 5:15 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 8.

"They were very open and very helpful and let me know what was going on and the time frame and what our rights were," Rand said of the state agency handling the permit process. "They've been very good so far about that. But they also let me know that if these guys comply for the permit we've got to give him the permit. So we are hustling to get the word out there to regulators that there is more to this and it's going to impact you and me in my judgment in a negative way."

Rand noted there are two applications before the state: the sludge farm itself and the 4.8-million-gallon holding pond that would retain sludge shipped to the site during periods when sludge cannot be applied to the ground such as when the soil is saturated from rainfall, during heavy rains and when the ground is frozen or snow-covered. Both permits are in the state's period of public comment but neither was required for a public hearing until Rand asked for and was granted the meeting.

"It will do two things. No. 1 it will give people a chance to find out what the heck is going on here and No. 2 it slows it down because I think most people in Trimble County didn't have any idea any of this was happening until about three weeks ago and it's a lot to take in, a lot to understand and a lot to research and so that's what I've been doing over the last three weeks," Rand said of the hearing.

"I don't think it's any question that if you are an adjoining property owner it's going to have a negative effect on your property's value," said Rand, a local real estate and insurance agent. But we don't know the longterm affects of putting that much sludge on a piece of property, we don't know what it's going to smell like or how well it's going to be maintained."

Rand said he and other Trimble residents also know from experience that what a place starts out as is not always what it becomes. He said state permits are often just a starting point on what a facility will ultimately be in a matter of years and that once one permit is approved, it's often easier to get amendments and expansions and cited the massive Valley View Landfill on the other end of the county as an example of how a small company landfill can grow after being bought out by bigger corporations with expansion plans.

Rand said Trimble is surrounded by counties with zoning ordinances that give them a say in what can be located in their communities while Trimble is leaning toward abolishing its ordinance.

"Without any planning or zoning over here we won't have the ability to do that or it's much reduced. My fear is if this site gets permitted they will just expand their operation and pick up new customers and move down the road and buy the next farm," Rand said. "The problem we have is that everybody around us has zoning. Now Carroll County doesn't have it, but Carrollton does. We are sort of getting selected against in that everything that nobody else wants can go to Trimble County and that kind of feeds itself … nobody's going to come here and save us. We're either going to have to protect ourselves or live with the consequences."

While the Aug. 8 hearing will surely provide more information and offer an opportunity to comment on the proposal, it is not known if that will be enough to roadblock the sludge farm and holding pond.

"I have people ask me that all the time and I just don't know. It's sort of still unfolding … I don't know how much weight the regulators will give to public outcry," Rand said. "We're going to have to wait and see how that plays out, how the county ordinance that they have plays out and the zoning debate is still going on. They're in the process of repealing but they've just had their first reading and they'd still need a second reading so we have to see how that plays out over the next month."

Rand said the threat of a sludge farm as a neighbor has led some residents to rethink their opposition to zoning.

"It has certainly changed a lot of people's opinions in the community but I don't know if it's changed any votes on the court yet but it has certainly changed peoples' views in the community a great deal and we know how that deal works. It goes downhill to the politicians," said Rand.

Lowry wins British Open in return to Ireland

By DOUG FERGUSON
AP Golf Writer

PORTRUSH, Northern Ireland — The outcome was never in doubt to just about everyone but Shane Lowry.

A year ago, he sat in the parking lot at Carnoustie and cried after missing the cut in the British Open for the fourth straight year. Even with a four-shot lead Sunday at Royal Portrush, in a raging wind and pouring rain, Lowry kept telling his caddie he was nervous and scared, worried that he would ruin a storybook ending to the first Open in Northern Ireland in 68 years.

"I suppose I didn't even know going out this morning if I was good enough to win a major," Lowry said. "And look, I'm here now, a major champion. I can't believe I'm saying it, to be honest."

The 32-year-old Irishman marks his golf ball with a green shamrock. This had nothing to do with luck.

With stout nerves and a soft touch around the greens, Lowry gave a sell-out crowd what they wanted to see. He endured the worst weather of the week, held up under Sunday pressure and expectations of fans who cheered his every step, and won the British Open by six shots.

All he could think about was that walk up the final hole, and it was everything he imagined.

Even as the rain stopped, the tears began flowing.

"I can't believe this is me standing here," Lowry said has he cradled the silver claret jug. "I can't believe this is mine."

Lowry closed with a 1-over 72, the first time since 1996 the Open champion was over par in the final round, and it was no less impressive. More difficult than the rain was wind strong enough to break an umbrella. Lowry made four bogeys in the toughest stretch of Royal Portrush without losing ground.

No one from the last 12 groups broke par. No one got closer than three shots of Lowry all day.

"It was Shane's time, Shane's tournament," said Tommy Fleetwood, who closed with a 74 to finish runner-up for the second time in a major.

Thousands of fans who filled these links off the North Atlantic began to celebrate when Lowry rolled in an 8-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole to stretch his lead to six with three holes to play.

His smile got wider with every hole coming in. The cheers got louder.

When his approach to the 18th was just on the fringe, he stretched out his arms and hugged caddie Bo Martin, whom Lowry had leaned on with brutal honesty.

"He was great at keeping me in the moment," Lowry said. "I kept

Munoz, Gallegos lead Cards over Reds

CINCINNATI (AP) — Utility player Yairo Munoz wants his St. Louis manager to trust that he'll produce in any situation. He banked a lot of trust on Sunday.

Munoz celebrated a rare start with a home run and a triple to help the Cardinals beat the Cincinnati Reds 3-1.

Munoz, making his 16th start among 55 games, also singled to finish with three of the six hits for the Cardinals, who improved to 7-3 since the All-Star break.

"I try to prepare myself to come into any situation that (manager Mike) Shildt puts me in," Munoz said through an interpreter. "I try to have a good game, so he'll trust me more."

His second homer of the season in the ninth, off Raisel Iglesias, gave St. Louis an insurance run.

"He takes the right approach," Shildt said. "He's got the ability to change his approach during an at bat."

The Reds avoided their ninth shutout loss of the season on Phillip Ervin's eighth-inning pinch-hit home run off Andrew Miller.

Just two Reds baserunners got as far as second base in the first four innings against Jack Flaherty, who was 0-3 over his last 10 starts since winning at Atlanta on May 14, before they loaded the bases with nobody out in the fifth.

Flaherty got Yasiel Puig to pop out, and Giovanny Gallegos (2-1) came on to fan Josh VanMeter and Scooter Gennett, the first two of four straight strikeouts.

"When I'm in the bullpen, I just try to be ready for any situation," Gallegos said. "I just come in and try to throw strikes. I try not to think too much. I just try to make good pitches."

"That was a tough spot," Shildt said. "Then he goes out and has a big sixth, too."

"You get in that situation, it's a competition," Reds manager David Bell said. "The Cardinals won that competition. It turned out that was the difference in the game."

Carlos Martinez pitched the ninth for his eighth save.

Anthony DeSclafani (5-5) struck out a career-high 11 and allowed just one earned run in six innings, but a shaky second was all the Cardinals needed.

Four different Cardinals stole bases while St. Louis was scoring two runs in the inning. Tyler O'Neill scored from third on Munoz's one-out bloop single to right over a drawn-in Cincinnati infield. Andrew Knizer walked and, after a double steal, Munoz scored an unearned run on Suarez's error of Harrison Bader's sharp one-hopper.

"Anthony pitched as well as he possibly could," Bell said. "That inning cost him for sure."

"I have to be more aware of the runners," said DeSclafani, who allowed four hits and no walks. "That falls on me."

CARDINAL MOVES

Following Saturday's game, the Cardinals optioned RHP Dominic Leone and RHP Ryan Helsley to Triple-A Memphis and replaced them on Sunday with INF Rangel Ravelo and LHP Tyler Webb.

THROWBACK NO. 9

The Reds on Sunday wore replicas of the uniforms worn by the 1961 National League champions, the ninth of the 15 throwback uniforms they are wearing this season to help celebrate the 150th anniversary of baseball's first all-professional team. The jerseys were sleeveless, and many players went without T-shirts underneath, including Derek Dietrich and Michael Lorenzen, who were spotted lifting weights in the dugout.

DRIVER CHANGE: The Unlimited Racing Group, owner of the U-11 J&Ds Unlimited hydroplane (above), made a driver change on Friday, replacing Tom Thompson (below left) with Jamie Nilsen (below right). Nilsen, who last drove an Unlimited in 2014, has spent the last several years driving the GP-55 Cabo Marine in the Grand Prix World class, claiming four wins in that series including at Madison last year. Nilsen replaces Thompson at helm of U-11

By OWEN BLAUMAN
H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Racing Series

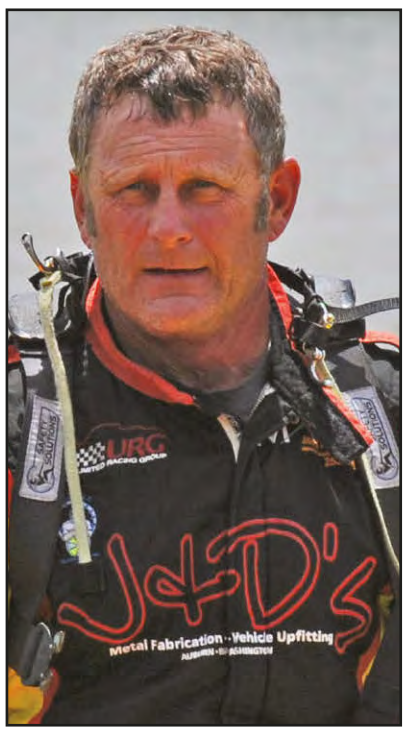
LYNNWOOD, Wash. — In a rare mid-season change of drivers, Unlimited Racing Group, owner of the U-11 J&D's presented by Reliable Diamond Tool, announced Friday that they have replaced driver Tom Thompson after eight years with the team. Jamie Nilsen, a long-time Pacific Northwest boat racer who began racing outboard-powered hydroplanes at the age of 12 and current Grand Prix World hydroplane driver, will take over as the team's new driver.

The 34-year-old Nilsen broke into the ranks of the H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Racing Series in 2013 when he drove the U-48 Snoqualmie Casino in the Albert Lee Cup in Seattle and continued in 2014 driving the U-21 Lakeridge Paving for two races, including at Madison.

Although Nilsen has not driven an H1 Unlimited since, he has been racing in the smaller, automotive-powered Grand Prix World class hydroplanes, which he intends to continue to race when not in the world's fastest race boats, H1 Unlimited hydroplanes.

"I am ready to rock, I am honored to be driving for the Raneys," Nilsen, a financial analyst for the U.S. Navy in Bremerton, Washington said. "Tom left some really big shoes to fill."

Nilsen will have to re-qualify for his H1 Unlimited hydroplane driver's license at his first race in the Tri-Cities, Washington this weekend. He will be required to make 15 laps on the 2-1/2 mile course, with 10 of those laps over 130 mph and start two preliminary heat races on the outside.



"Our team goals are to get me re-qualified and to get comfortable in the race boat," Nilsen said. "We will slowly increase our performance as we go and despite having to re-qualify as a driver we will find a way to get in the final at Tri-Cities."

Nilsen, a resident of Gig Harbor, Washington, has been an athlete all his life. A stand-out baseball player in high school and in college at Central Washington University, he signed as an undrafted free agent with the Kansas City Royals in 2008 and played a season in Rookie Ball for the organization before giving up the baseball dream to concentrate on boat racing.

Without an H1 Unlimited hydroplane ride since the later part of 2014 season, Nilsen has been honing his driving skills in the GP-55 GPW hydroplane and has won four races in that class including at Madison last year.

"I am very confident that Jamie can handle the double duty," said Scott Pierce, retired H1 Unlimited

Rivera fittingly closes Hall of Fame ceremon

By JOHN KEKIS
AP Sports Writer

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — For Mariano Rivera, it was the culmination of a storied career, dreams of being the next Pelé long since forgotten. For Brandy Halladay, the Baseball Hall of Fame induction ceremony was a tearful moment to reflect on the accomplishments of her late husband, and she handled a difficult task admirably.

Rivera, the career saves leader and the first player unanimously voted into the Hall by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, was greeted by chants of his name from the adoring crowd as he stepped to the podium in a fitting close to Sunday's ceremony. He spoke in both English and at the end in Spanish, rarely looking down at the speech he had prepared.

"I think I choose that because sometimes you write words and it doesn't sound right," Rivera said. "But when you come from the heart, it comes right. My intention was always to speak from the heart."

Rivera and fellow closer Lee Smith, starters Mike Mussina and Roy Halladay, and designated hitters Edgar Martinez and Harold Baines were feted on a sun-splashed afternoon in Cooperstown. A crowd estimated at 55,000, the second-largest for an induction ceremony, quickly made Rivera feel at peace.

"You're special for me," said Rivera, who left his native Panama in 1990 unable to speak English. "Thank you for your help. Latin American fans, thank you. Thank you for loving me. I'm so humbled and blessed to receive this incredible honor. God bless you all."

As a child, Rivera dreamed of being a soccer player in the mold of the great Brazilian star, Pelé. Instead, he found his niche on a baseball mound and finished his career with 652 saves. He pitched 19 seasons in the major leagues, all with the New York Yankees, and retired with 952 games finished — also a record. A 13-time All-Star, Rivera helped the Yankees win five World Series titles and seven American League pennants.

Brandy Halladay fought back tears as she spoke for her late husband, who had two sons.

"I knew I was going to cry at some point. It's overwhelming the amount of people here today," she said, tears welling in her eyes, her voice quavering with emotion. "I'm so grateful you're here. I can't tell you how many hugs I've gotten. There are not enough words to thank you.

"I know how honored Roy would be to be sitting here with such accomplished men. Thank you for being such a good example to him and to supporting him in his career. This is not my speech to give."

The son of a commercial pilot, Roy Halladay was 40 when he was killed in a plane crash in November 2017 into the Gulf of Mexico while piloting his own plane alone off the Florida coast 20 miles from his home. A toxicology report showed high levels of amphetamines and morphine in his system and hints of an antidepressant.

"I think that Roy would want everyone to know that people are not

Ledecky stunned in world 400 free

By BETH HARRIS
AP Sports Writer

GWANGJU, South Korea — Katie Ledecky is usually there in the end, her endurance powering her to the wall well ahead of the competition.

Someone else got there first at the world championships on Sunday night.

Ariarne Titmus of Australia chased down Ledecky over the last lap to win the 400-meter freestyle and deny the American star a record fourth straight title. It was Ledecky's first defeat in the event at a major international meet since 2013.

"This stings a little," Ledecky said. "It's not what I'm used to."

China's Sun Yang was able to do what Ledecky could not: win his record fourth consecutive title in the men's 400 free.

As expected, it didn't come without controversy.

Sun's rival, Mack Horton of Australia, ignored Sun on the medals podium. They didn't shake hands and Horton didn't even step onto the podium; instead he stood behind it when given his silver medal.

Titmus overcame a 0.62-second deficit going into the last lap and won by 1.21 seconds over Ledecky. The 18-year-old Aussie touched in 3 minutes, 58.76 seconds.

"I knew that I probably had that in me," Titmus said, "but, yeah, it's pretty surreal at the moment."

Ledecky finished in 3:59.97 — well off her world record of 3:56.46 set at the 2016 Rio de Janeiro Olympics.

"She ran me right down," the American said.

American Leah Smith took bronze in 4:01.29.

An admittedly nervous Ledecky had the slowest last lap of anyone in the eight-woman final. Titmus went 1.83 seconds faster over the last 50 meters.

"I made a move and then I came in at the last turn and felt like I could barely push off," Ledecky said. "My legs and arms just tightened up that last 50 and she took advantage of that."

Titmus led through the first 200 meters — dipping under world-record pace on the first lap — before Ledecky moved in front with 250 meters to go.

The American was still ahead turning for home. But Titmus pulled even midway through the last lap and surged to the wall first, becoming the first Aussie to win since Tracey Wickham in 1978.

"There was no pressure for me," Titmus said. "Katie's a true champion and I'm just happy that my swim was great today, but I'm sure she'll be back to race me again next year."

In the men's 400 free, Sun worked his way from fifth to first and then easily kept Horton at bay over the last lap to surpass Aussie great Ian Thorpe's record of three straight wins.

"This is the greatest achievement in history for the Chinese team," Sun said through a translator. "Personally, it's a great start for myself and for the China team as well."

He touched first in 3:42.44. Horton took silver in 2:43.17, while Gabriele Detti of Italy earned bronze in 3:43.23.

Sun climbed on the lane rope and waved four fingers on each hand in celebration. He pounded the water and was the last swimmer to leave the pool. Sun got out and thrust his arms in the air to screams and cheers from Chinese fans, who hung banners featuring his face from the stands.

"I was so thankful for my fans," Sun said. "I am aware that I have fans and also the haters in the venue, but I was just very satisfied to win."

Sun won his other 400 free titles in 2013, 2015 and 2017.

His presence at the world meet has drawn the ire of some swimmers, including Horton and American Lilly King. The Aussie is the only swimmer to beat Sun in the last eight years, taking gold in the 400 free at the Rio Olympics in 2016. That's when Horton called Sun a "drug cheat" for his three-month doping suspension in 2014.

Asked what his overriding emotion was, Horton replied: "Frustration. I think you know in what respect."

Olympic breaststroke champion King was critical of FINA, the sport's world governing body, for allowing Sun to compete at worlds.

"That's really sketchy and pretty insane," she said Friday.

Sun said, "I am aware of the rumors that have been going around, but I try to just concentrate on my swimming and I will keep trying to put a lot of effort in my swimming."

On the medals podium, Sun and Detti joined together on the top spot for photos but Horton didn't join them.

"I don't think I need to say anything," Horton said. "His actions and how it has been handled speaks louder than anything I could say."

Sun said he was aware Horton has a problem with him.

"Disrespecting me was OK, but disrespecting China was unfortunate," Sun said. "I feel sorry about that."

Sun is currently facing alleged doping rule violations that risk a ban from the 2020 Tokyo Olympics and he has requested a public trial at the Court of Arbitration for Sport in September to defend himself.

The World Anti-Doping Agency is challenging a decision by FINA, swimming's world governing body, merely to warn him over incidents during a doping control team's attempts to take blood and urine samples at his home in China last September, while allowing him to continue competing.

"I don't care about it," Detti said. "He won so today he was stronger than us. Next year I'll try to beat him."

In the men's 4x100 freestyle relay, Nathan Adrian anchored the Americans to a victory seven months after announcing he had been diagnosed with testicular cancer.

Their time of 3:09.06 was a championship record, lowering the mark of 3:09.21 set by the U.S. in 2009 during the high-tech suit era.

The women's 4x100 free relay went to Australia in 3:30.21, also a championship record. The U.S. took silver and Canada earned bronze.

Adam Peaty of Britain became the first man to go under 57 seconds in the 100 breaststroke.

He won his semifinal heat in 56.88 seconds, bettering his old world record of 57.10 set last August in Glasgow, Scotland.

Peaty is seeking his third straight world title in the event. He also won the 100 breast at the Rio Olympics.

The final is Monday night.

perfect," Brandy said. "We are all imperfect and flawed in one way or another. We all struggle, but with hard work, humility and dedication, imperfect people can still have perfect moments. Roy was blessed in his life and in his career to have some perfect moments."

A two-time Cy Young Award winner, Halladay amassed a 203-105 record in a 16-year career with Toronto and Philadelphia. He became just the second pitcher in major league history to throw a no-hitter in the postseason, opening the 2010 NL Division Series with one against the Cincinnati Reds in the first playoff start of his career. He also pitched a perfect game that season. Halladay was elected in his first year on the ballot.

The family decided that there would be no logo on his plaque because both organizations meant a lot to Halladay.

Mussina, who pitched for 18 major league seasons, posted a record of 270-153 and was a seven-time Gold Glove winner. He spent his entire career in the high-scoring AL East with the Orioles and Yankees.

"I spent a lot of time reflecting on my time in baseball," said Mussina, the oldest first-time 20-game winner in MLB history when he reached the milestone at age 39 in 2008, his final season in the majors. "I was never fortunate to win a Cy Young Award or be a World Series champion, win 300 games or strike out 3,000 hitters. My opportunities for those achievements are in the past. Today, I get to become a member of the Baseball Hall of Fame. This time I made it."

Smiling from beginning to end, Smith congratulated his new classmates before crediting his family and hometown of Castor, Louisiana, for much of his success.

"It's been my family. They're the main reason I'm standing here today," Smith said. "To my mom and dad — your support has meant everything to me."

Smith pitched 18 seasons for the Cubs, Red Sox, Cardinals, Yankees, Orioles, Angels, Reds and Expos and retired as MLB's career saves leader with 478, a title he held for 13 seasons. That total now ranks third all-time, as do his 802 games finished.

Martinez was a seven-time All-Star and five-time Silver Slugger Award winner for Seattle, where he spent his entire 18-year career. He won two AL batting titles, led the league in on-base percentage three times, and was named the outstanding designated hitter five times, an award that now bears his name.

"I am honored and humbled to be standing here," said Martinez, who was born in New York, grew up in Puerto Rico and also delivered part of his speech in Spanish. "It is hard to believe that a dream that started when I was 10 years old (ended here). The first time I saw Roberto Clemente, all I wanted to do was play the game. What an honor to have my plaque in the Hall alongside his."

The soft-spoken Baines, a Maryland native who still lives there, never displayed much emotion in his 22-year career, but his voice cracked throughout his speech.

"Somehow I acquired a reputation for not saying much. I'm not sure why," he deadpanned at the start. "From teachers to coaches who showed me kindness and discipline, I thank you all for what you've done for me. If I can leave you with one message, it's to give back to your community. I stand here very humbled. It has taken time to sink in."

•Reds-Cards

Reds pitchers finished with a season-high 15 strikeouts, the most since they struck out 18 Brewers on May 30 of last season.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Reds: OF Nick Senzel was expected to start on Sunday after pinch-running and playing defense on Saturay, but manager David Bell chose to have him avoid a full day in 90-degree weather and not risk the right hamstring that tightened on Wednesday.

UP NEXT

Cardinals: The Pirates roughed up RHP Daniel Ponce de Leon (1-0) for eight hits and four runs in 3 2/3 innings of a 6-5 St. Louis win on Wednesday.

Reds: RHP Sonny Gray (5-6) allowed four hits in eight shutout innings of a Cincinnati 3-0 win over Milwaukee on July 3.

Reds snap 4-game losing skid with 3-2 win over Cardinals

Reds 3, Cardinals 2
(Saturday)

Josh VanMeter's attempt to move the runner cleared the bases.

Yasiel Puig hit a game-tying double to end Miles Mikolas' shutout bid, VanMeter followed with his first major league home run and the Cincinnati Reds snapped a four-game losing streak with a 3-2 win over the St. Louis Cardinals on Saturday.

"Man on second nobody out — honestly, I was just trying to move the runner," VanMeter said. "I got a pitch elevated and hit it out of the park, and did it feel good. It is a weight off my shoulders.

"The other cool part of it is, I knew I got it. Usually, I don't show emotion. Emotions kind of took over. It was a lot of fun, a dream come true. You hit so many in Triple A, then you come up here and don't hit one in 49 at-bats. You wonder if you're ever going to hit one."

VanMeter and Eugenio Suarez each had two hits for the Reds, who are in last place in the NL Central, a season-high nine games behind first-place Chicago.

"It was a good game," St. Louis manager Mike Shildt said "They pitched well. We pitched well. They came out on top.

Mikolas hadn't allowed a runner past first base before Suarez led off the seventh with a walk and scored from first on a double into the left-center field gap by Puig. Two pitches later, VanMeter homered into the Cincinnati bullpen down the right field line.

"We are really happy for Josh VanMeter," Reds manager David Bell said. "It was a big home run, obviously. He can hit. He has a good approach at the plate. He takes good at-bats. His demeanor is calm. He's competitive, but he is also very steady. It shows up in good at-bats."

"You never want to start an inning walking a guy," Mikolas said. "There were a couple of close pitches."

Mikolas (6-10) allowed six hits and three runs with two walks and four strikeouts. He also hit a batter.

Amir Garrett (4-1) pitched a perfect seventh in his first appearance since July 2 after coming off the disabled list on Saturday.

Matt Wieters led off the sixth with his seventh homer of the season for the Cardinals, who had won three straight and six of seven to move into second place in the division. Harrison Bader scored from third on Jose Martinez's groundout against Michael Lorenzen in the eighth.

Lorenzen stayed in the game and earned his sixth save.

One day after St. Louis overpowered Cincinnati in a 12-11, nine-inning slugfest that lasted 11 minutes shy of four hours, Mikolas and All-Star Luis Castillo hooked up in a pitcher's duel through six innings that ended in a crisp 2 hours, 36 minutes.

The teams turned a combined five double plays through the first five innings while moving just one runner into scoring position.

Castillo left for a pinch-hitter after six innings. He limited St. Louis to five hits and one run with a walk and five strikeouts.

FRESH ARM

After watching their relievers pile up 15 innings over the last three games, the Cardinals recalled RHP Ryan Helsley from Triple-A Memphis and optioned INF Edmundo Sosa to Memphis before Saturday's game. Helsley has pitched in seven St. Louis games this season.

WELCOME BACK

The Reds activated RHP Raisel Iglesias from the three-day paternity list and LHP Amir Garrett from the 10-day injured list before Saturday's game. RHP Jimmy Herget and Matt Bowman were optioned to Triple-A Louisville.

COVERING GROUND

Reds SS Jose Iglesias sprinted a long way into short left field near the line to make a lunging backhand grab with his back to the infield of Tommy Edman's popup with nobody out and Mikolas on second in the sixth.

ANY WAY

One out into the sixth inning, Mikolas plunked pinch-hitter Derek Dietrich in the right knee with a pitch, the major league-leading 22nd time Dietrich has been by a pitch this season.

TRAINER'S ROOM

Reds: The Reds hope RHP Tyler Mahle can make his next start on Wednesday at Milwaukee after his hamstring tightened on his last pitch Saturday.

telling him how nervous I was, how scared I was, how much I didn't want to mess it up. All I could think about was walking down 18 with a four- or five-shot lead, and lucky I got to do that."

The loudest roar of a raucous week was for a tap-in par that made Lowry a major champion.

"He's done brilliantly," Lee Westwood said after grinding out a 73 to tie for fourth. "All the chasers would have wanted tough conditions and he's clearly played brilliantly to be on the score he has, under the pressure he's under."

Fleetwood, the only player who kept Lowry in range, had chances early to put more pressure on Lowry. He missed a 10-foot birdie putt on the opening hole when Lowry still had work left for bogey. Fleetwood missed a 5-foot par putt on the third and his hopes ended from a bunker and the rough that led to double bogey on the 14th.

"I never really got close enough, and Shane played great," Fleetwood said.

Tony Finau shot 71 to finish alone in third, though he was never closer than seven shots. Brooks Koepka, going for his fourth major in the last seven, began the final round seven shots behind and opened with four straight bogeys. He shot 74 and tied for fourth.

Royal Portrush last hosted the British Open in 1951, the only time it had been outside Scotland and England. It pinned hopes at the start of the week on Rory McIlroy, who missed the cut by one shot. It celebrated Darren Clarke hitting the first tee shot Thursday. The other Ulsterman, Portrush native Graeme McDowell, basked in the loudest cheers he has heard this side of the Ryder Cup when he walked up the 18th green on Sunday.

And then along came Lowry, who teamed with McIlroy to bring Irish golf a European Amateur title in 2007, and who won the Irish Open as an amateur 10 years ago. He joins Padraig Harrington as Irishmen to win majors, while McIlroy, McDowell, Clarke and Fred Daly are major champions from Northern Ireland.

"Everyone knows we're all one country when it comes to golf," Lowry said.

It was one big group hug when it ended, starting with his wife and daughter, and his parents. Harrington and McDowell were among those waiting behind the 18th green to share in the celebration, along with Koepka and his caddie, Ricky Elliott, once a promising amateur who grew up at Royal Portrush.

"I didn't feel great out there. It was probably the most uncomfortable I've ever felt on a golf course," Lowry said. "You're out there trying to win an Open in your home country, and it's just incredibly difficult."

It showed early when Lowry pulled his tee shot into the rough, hit into a deep bunker well short of the green and had to make an 8-foot putt just to escape with bogey. The wind was picking up and it was relentless for so much of the day. Lowry made his move on the more forgiving holes early with three birdies in a four-hole stretch through the par-5 seventh that boosted his lead to six.

And then he held on.

J.B. Holmes, who shared the 36-hole lead with Lowry until falling back Saturday, really went the wrong direction. He hit his first tee shot out-of-bounds. And it only got worse. He made one birdie and shot 87.

Lowry finished at 15-under 269 and earned $1.935 million.

He shared his greatest moment with his family who paved the way, the players who inspired and encouraged him through the lows. And after he was introduced as "champion golfer of the year," he shared it with thousands of people he didn't even know, all of them crammed along the hillocks and swales, along the edge of the ocean, and who sat in the horseshoe-shaped grandstands on the 18th under umbrellas waiting for the Irishman to arrive.

Holding up the claret jug, Lowry said to them, "This one's for you."

Kevin Harvick holds off Denny Hamlin at New Hampshire

By DOUG ALDEN
Associated Press

LOUDON, N.H. — Kevin Harvick used a late bump and run to win last year at New Hampshire Motor Speedway.

Repeating required another bump, but there was little time for a run before Harvick crossed the finish line 0.210 seconds ahead of Denny Hamlin on Sunday.

"It turned into a wild finish," Harvick said after his first NASCAR Cup Series victory of the season.

Harvick gave Hamlin a late opening when he had trouble navigating a group of cars that were off the lead lap. After nearly catching him on the back stretch, Hamlin made another run through the final two turns but couldn't regain the lead.

"I just told him 'we were leaving on a tow truck or winning the race today,'" said Harvick, who hadn't won since Texas in November.

Driving a backup car after wrecking during a practice lap Friday, Hamlin led 113 laps, but couldn't catch Harvick after pitting on a caution after Kyle Larson blew a tire on the 265th lap.

"I just could not break that barrier," Hamlin said. "I could not get him to make that one little slip to give me the bottom."

The 43-year-old Harvick led the final 41 laps in the No. 4 Stewart-Haas Racing Ford for his second straight victory at the track. He has four victories at the mile oval to tie the record set by Jeff Burton.

Harvick won at New Hampshire last year after a late bump from behind knocked Kyle Busch off the lead. On Sunday, Harvick had a late bump again, but this time it was nudging Hamlin just enough to the side coming out of the final turn.

"I'm like, 'You're not getting under me again.' And he drove to the outside of me, and I waited until he got near me, and I just put a wheel on him," Harvick said.

Erik Jones was third, and Ryan Blaney fourth.

NASCAR paid tribute to crew chief Nick Harrison, who died overnight after Saturday's Xfinity Series race.

NASCAR announced Harrison's death during the drivers' meeting before the race Sunday and honored him with a moment of silence. No details were given.

The 37-year-old Harrison was the crew chief for Justin Haley, who finished in 13th Saturday. In Harrison's first season with Kaulig Racing, Haley had two top-five finishes and finished 12 times in the top 10.

"Not just a crew chief, but a friend to everyone who knew him," Haley wrote on Twitter. "I, and everyone at Kaulig Racing are devastated. He will be greatly missed."

Harrison was a veteran crew chief with all three NASCAR national series since 2006. His teams won five Xfinity Series races with drivers Austin Dillon, Paul Menard and Kurt Busch, who were all driving Sunday.

"We all lost a friend last night. We love you Nick Harrison. You were a leader, and a great friend to all," Kurt Busch posted on Twitter. "Nick really helped me rebuild my career when I was at a low point. RIP."

PLAYOFF POSITION

Joey Logano was ninth. He has a three-point lead over Kyle Busch in the point standings. Busch, who won the first stage Sunday after qualifying second, finished eighth.

FIELD FILLING

Following Harvick's victory, nine drivers have clinched playoff berths with six regular season races still to go.

hydroplane driver and owner of Nilsen's GPW hydro. "I believe Jamie is a unique talent, and I am very proud how he has progressed in is driving."

Ironically, the last mid-season driver change in the H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Racing Series came when Thompson replaced JW Myers in 2012 with the Unlimited Racing Group team.

Thompson's best season was 2018 when he won his first preliminary heat race and followed the win with two other heat wins that season. He ended the year in third place in the H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Racing Series national high points championship. His best championship final came at the San Diego Bayfair race in 2013 where he placed second.

"The entire U-11 team would like to sincerely thank Tom Thompson and his family for the years of hard work and dedication he spent racing for us," the team said in a statement posted on its Facebook page. Scott Raney, co-owner and crew chief said the team, will not be making any further comments regarding their driver change.

Thompson, a resident of Cambridge, Maryland, issued a statement thanking the Raneys, owners of the team and his former crew.

"I can not thank the team enough for all the hard work for always having the boat ready and safe," Thompson said.

Thompson said he did not quit and still has a desire to drive an H1 Unlimited hydroplane but was told he was let go and "was being replaced for financial reasons and improved results."

Thompson, who also races in other powerboat racing classes said, "As owners, you have to make decisions to improve your team."

The always competitive and gritty driver ended his comments by thanking his fans, friends for all their support through the years and wished the team's new driver Nilsen good luck. Thompson told fans, "Maybe you will get to cheer me on again some day."

The H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Racing Series has three races remaining on its 2019 schedule: July 26-28, HAPO Columbia Cup in Kennewick, Washington; Aug. 2-4, HomeStreet Bank Cup in Seattle; and Sept. 13-15, HomeStreet Bank Bayfair on San Diego's Mission Bay.

For ticket, race information and live streaming options check out the series' website at H1Unlimited.com.

Tours Saturday of historic buildings

Elks Lodge

Tack Factory

Cotton Mill

The Cornerstone Society Inc will host brief tours of three major renovations of historic Madison buildings Saturday, July 27, from 9 a.m. to noon.

The three buildings are the Tack Factory, the former Elks Building and the Eagle Cotton Mill.

The Tack Factory at 1001 West Second Street is in mid-renovation, which will transform the former factory to 50 units of apartments. The oldest part of the building was built in 1884. The renovation was provided with a tax credit of more than $1 million by the State of Indiana Housing & Community Development Authority and through a proposed investment in excess of $9 million in Madison by The Riverside Tower Lofts.

The former Elks Building at 420 West Street was damaged by a fire in August 2006 and further damaged by a storm in 2008. The Cornerstone Society took over the building to work on restoration that will convert the early 20th century former lodge into high-profile apartments in downtown Madison. Clean-up began in late 2017 and several of the units are almost complete.

The Eagle Cotton Mill on Vaughn Drive at St. Michaels Avenue is the newest of these three renovation projects. It was constructed in 1884 and is in the development stage. Visitors will see the plans that have been prepared for its future use as a boutique hotel and conference center along the river. The project is anticipated to cost about $21 million.

Members of The Cornerstone Society will be present at each of the sites to greet visitors and provide historic information about each of the buildings. There will be no charge for these tours, but Cornerstone will accept donations.

Dealing with bully and nipping it in the bud

Annie Lane

Dear Annie: My son is 7 years old and is attending a soccer camp this summer. He is an average player and loves the game, and he has made friends at the camp. The problem is that one of the boys is a bully, and he targets my son all the time, calling him "a bad player" and kicking the soccer ball right in his face. This has gone on for more than three days. Each day, my son comes home and says the kid was meaner than he was the day before.

I left a voicemail for the coach asking if he would do something about this, but he did not reply. That infuriated me. I thought bullying was a thing of the past and that administrators of schools and camps did everything possible to prevent it.

My husband took off early from work one day so he could observe the practice and talk to the coach. The coach assured him that he was "handling it," but I don't have a great feeling about this. The fact that he ignored my phone call says that he does not take this seriously. The fact that he allowed it to happen in the first place is a really bad sign.

Bullying is terrible. I realize that some people will say that it is human nature, that it's always been this way and that it can sometimes teach kids lessons about how to interact with each other. But I say no way. In 2019, there is no excuse for bullying at a summer camp. I'm not sure what we should do at this point and am turning to you for advice. — Anti-Bullying Mom

Dear Anti-Bullying Mom: It sounds like you took the necessary steps to help be an advocate for your son. There is a difference between a kid being mean or making an insensitive comment and consistent bullying. The reality is that kids can say mean things, sometimes not even on purpose, and they usually can sort it out themselves. In this case, it sounds like it was bullying and not just a rude comment.

Bullying is usually consistent and persistent, so you took the right steps by having your husband make the coach aware of the situation. Hopefully, that is the end of it. If the bully persists, and the coach does nothing, I would complain to the director of the camp and keep an open dialogue with your son about steps he can take to defend himself.

"Ask Me Anything: A Year of Advice From Dear Annie" is out now! BRIDGE

WHAT DOES THE CARD TELL HIS PARTNER?

Josh Billings, a humorist and lecturer whose real name was Henry Wheeler Shaw, said, "Life consists not in holding good cards, but in playing those you hold well."

It helps to have good cards, especially if you are playing for money. But when you are on defense, you tend to have few honors. However, perhaps you can still gain a plus score.

In today's deal, South is in four spades. West leads the heart ace. How should he continue if East plays either the heart two or the heart 10?

After South's textbook weak three and West's takeout double, North sensibly raised to four spades. He could see four potential losers, but he did not know how well his opponents could do in hearts. Also, he did not show his diamonds, because he knew of a 10-card major-suit fit, and why give East the chance to advance with four hearts?

From the dummy, it should be apparent to both defenders that they need to take two hearts and two clubs immediately. West is wondering who has the club king. If East does, heart ace, heart king, club ace and club to the king will get the job done. But if South has the club king, life is harder.

At trick one, it is East's job to say whether he holds the heart queen. If he plays the heart two, he denies the queen, and West should play his partner for the club king.

Here, though, East signals with the heart 10, showing the queen. Then West continues with a low heart. East takes the trick and shifts to a club to defeat the contract.

That is textbook attitude signaling.
